Coverage for Addiction and Mental Illness:
Now It Is the Law

How to be your best advocate when working with your health insurance company
Hope starts with help

Starting in 2010, millions of people and their families who need help for addiction to alcohol or other drugs have a new resource: their own health insurance. A federal law expands access to treatment by prohibiting most insurance plans from restricting coverage or imposing unequal limitations on treatment options. Even though insurers and employers are aware of this new law and their required compliance, it is up to you, the consumer, to make sure you or your loved ones receive the resources for treatment you need and deserve. Know your rights. Don’t be afraid to stand up and speak out for the benefits required under the law.
Who you need to contact

- Call Member Services at your insurance company.
- Have your membership identification ready.
- Write down the name of the Member Services representative who talks with you.
- Take notes of your conversation.

What questions you need to ask

- Ask what “levels of care” are covered for addiction treatment. Examples of levels of care include: inpatient, outpatient, residential, hospital-based, and partial hospitalization.
- Ask for clarification of in-network and out-of-network providers and the percentage covered by insurance for each.
- Ask what your out-of-pocket maximum expense is.
- Ask for the criteria your insurance company uses to determine medical necessity.

Negotiating with your insurance provider can be stressful and difficult. Don’t give up.
What are the new law’s basic requirements?
Starting on July 1, 2010, employer-sponsored group health plans cannot discriminate in their coverage of addiction and mental health benefits. Plans still are not required to cover these services. If they do, they must have financial requirements and treatment limitations that are no more restrictive than those placed on medical or surgical benefits. This applies to out-of-pocket expenses, co-payments and deductibles, as well as medical management criteria related to “medical necessity,” “prior authorization,” “concurrent review,” and “utilization review.”

Are there exceptions?
Yes, small businesses with 50 or fewer employees are exempt. Also, the new federal law protects any stronger state laws mandating coverage for addiction and mental health treatment.

What happens if I seek treatment resources that are not within my plan’s network?
Choosing to go out-of-network no longer means you are out of luck. An insurer that provides benefits for addiction and mental illness treatment and that provides out-of-network coverage for medical/surgical benefits must provide equal out-of-network coverage for addiction and mental illness treatment.

Does the law apply to other health plans?
Yes. In addition to group health plans and insurers, Medicaid managed care plans and state children’s health insurance programs are included.

What can I do if I am denied treatment or my options are restricted?
The new law requires that the insurer must, upon request, provide you with the reason for the denial. If the plan says service was not “medically necessary,” you are entitled to request and receive the plan’s medical necessity criteria specific to mental health and addiction treatment coverage.
Glossary of Terms

Co-Insurance  An amount an individual may pay for services after a deductible has been paid. Co-insurance is usually a percentage of what the health care provider will receive for the services. For example, the individual pays 20% of the charges for a service and the insurer pays 80%.

Copayment  A predetermined, flat fee an individual pays for health care services, after a deductible has been paid and in addition to what the plan or insurer pays. For example, some plans may require a $50 copayment for each office visit.

Day Limit  Maximum number of days of coverage available through your insurer.

Deductible  The amount an individual must pay for health care expenses before an insurer covers the costs. Often, coverage includes yearly individual and family deductible amounts.

Denial of Claim  Refusal by an insurer to cover an individual’s health care services.

Explanation of Benefits (EOB)  An insurer’s written explanation to a claim, showing what they paid and what the client must pay. If the claim is partially or wholly denied, the EOB will describe a process for appeal.

In-Network Providers  Physicians, hospitals and other health care providers that have contracts with an insurer to provide services to its members, usually at discounted rates. Individuals with coverage usually pay less when using in-network providers because of those negotiated discounts.
Inpatient Health care services provided on an inpatient basis, meaning the individual stays overnight at an inpatient facility, typically a hospital.

Maximum Dollar Limit The maximum amount an insurer will pay for claims within a specific time period.

Medical Necessity Criteria used by insurers or their review agencies to determine coverage for various levels of care. Each reviewer may use a different set of criteria. One common set of criteria for mental health and addiction treatment coverage determinations comes from the American Society of Addiction Medicine. (www.asam.org)

Out-of-Plan / Out-of-Network Physicians, hospitals, and other health care providers that are not contracted with the plan or insurer to provide health care services at discounted rates. Depending on an individual’s plan, expenses incurred by services provided by out-of-plan health care professionals may not be covered, or may be only partially covered.

Out-of-Pocket Limit A predetermined amount that an individual must pay before the plan or insurer will pay 100% for an individual’s health care expenses. Out-of-pocket limits are usually applied on a yearly basis.

Outpatient Health care services provided on an outpatient basis, meaning the individual does not stay overnight at an inpatient facility, such as a hospital.

Pre-Certification An insurer’s review of an individual’s health care status or condition, that usually occurs prior to an individual being admitted to an inpatient facility, such as a treatment center. Pre-certification is part of determining health care coverage and might involve meeting medical necessity criteria.
Pre-Existing Condition  A coverage limitation that may apply when an individual’s health care coverage changes, as from one insurer to another or one employer to another. The limitation states that certain physical or mental conditions, either previously diagnosed or that would normally be expected to require treatment prior to coverage under the new policy, will not be covered under the new policy.

Reasonable and Customary Fees / Usual & Customary Fees (U&C)  The average fee charged by a particular type of health care practitioner within a geographic area. These fees are often used by insurers to determine the amount of coverage for health care provided by out-of-network providers. The individual may be responsible for any copayment, coinsurance and deductible, as well as any remaining portion of the provider’s fee that is not covered by the Reasonable and Customary Fee.

Residential  Health care services such as chemical dependency treatment in a residential setting that is not hospital based but is, rather, a freestanding facility.
Hazelden, a national nonprofit organization founded in 1949, helps people reclaim their lives from the disease of addiction. Through public awareness and advocacy efforts, Hazelden’s Center for Public Advocacy is dedicated to helping make addiction recovery available to all who need it.
