Hazelden, a national nonprofit organization founded in 1949, helps people reclaim their lives from the disease of addiction. Built on decades of knowledge and experience, Hazelden offers a comprehensive approach to addiction that addresses the full range of patient, family, and professional needs, including treatment and continuing care for youth and adults, research, higher learning, public education and advocacy, and publishing.

A life of recovery is lived "one day at a time." Hazelden publications, both educational and inspirational, support and strengthen lifelong recovery. In 1954, Hazelden published Twenty-Four Hours a Day, the first daily meditation book for recovering alcoholics, and Hazelden continues to publish works to inspire and guide individuals in treatment and recovery, and their loved ones. Professionals who work to prevent and treat addiction also turn to Hazelden for evidence-based curricula, informational materials, and videos for use in schools, treatment programs, and correctional programs.

Through published works, Hazelden extends the reach of hope, encouragement, help, and support to individuals, families, and communities affected by addiction and related issues.

Your Personal Money Behaviors

Your Current Financial Behaviors

A book can't diagnose you, and it's not a good idea to diagnose yourself. But you can get a good start on understanding if you have a problem by answering the questions below. The answers to these eight questions start you on your way to exploring whether you have a money addiction. (Circle Yes or No.)

	Are you up problems?	nable to stop spending money even when you know it causes

	YES	NO
14.	•	hange the subject or become upset when your spouse or partner scuss financial concerns with you?
	YES	NO
15.	Are you u	unable to say no to your child's or partner's requests?
	YES	NO
16.	•	unable to say no to salespeople?
	YES	NO

17.	Do you have poor financial habits, such as overdrawing your bank accounts, not balancing your checkbook, paying bills late, excessively using ATM or debit cards, or avoiding filing income tax returns?

YES NO

18. Do you try to influence other people's opinions of your financial situation, either by impressing others or downplaying your resources?

YES NO

19. Do you build up debt, pay it off, promise not to repeat the debt, and do it again anyway?

YES NO

20. Have you contemplated bankruptcy as a way to get out of your debt problems?

YES NO

21. Have you taken out home equity loans or second mortgages to pay off your debts?

YES NO

22. In general, do you see debt tools such as home equity loans, second mortgages, and bankruptcy as solutions to your problems?

YES NO

Your answers to these questions will help you understand if you tend to be a compulsive spender in some form. If you answered yes to eight or more questions, it's likely that you have a problem with spending money. Your problem may manifest itself in different ways: through shopping, credit cards, or a lifelong pattern of debt.

HOARDING HABITS (HOARDERS)

1.	Do you p	panic if your bank account goes beneath a certain amount?
	YES	NO
2.	Do you a	avoid replacing or repairing necessary items when they are broken?
	YES	NO
3.	Do you o	obsess over your bank balances and investment accounts?
	YES	NO
4.	•	ur family complain that you are too tight with money?
	YES	NO
5.	•	family members purchase items for you because you won't buy yourself?
	YES	NO
6.	Do you f	eel burdened by other people's demands on you for money?
	YES	NO
7.		attempt to control your spouse's or partner's spending?

8.	•	requently argue with your spouse or family about spending money?
	YES	NO
9.	•	u paid bills late even though you had money in the bank?
	YES	NO
10.	Do you s	secretly feel superior to people who freely spend money?
	1 E3	INO

Your answers to these questions will help you understand if you tend to be a hoarder. If you answered yes to four or more questions, it's likely that you suffer from financial obsession and hoarding behavior. Your relationship with money most likely affects those you love more than you realize.

F

		DERACHIEVERS)
1.	Do you avoid asking for a raise?
	YES	NO
2.	Do you	know your monthly expenses?
	YES	NO

	YES	NO
4.	Do othe	rs with your skills or experience make more money than you?
	YES	NO
5.	Do you	believe that you are living a downscaled or simpler life by choice?
	YES	NO
6.	Do you	own a business that is unable to issue you a regular paycheck?
	YES	NO
7.	•	re self-employed, do you avoid focusing on your profit until you income taxes?
	YES	NO
8.	Are you	passive and avoidant about pursuing money that is owed you?
	YES	NO

9. Are you concerned that others won't like you if you ask them to pay their share?
YES NO
10. Do you rely on a partner, your parents, or your siblings to lend you money for basic necessities?
YES NO
11. Did you avoid moving from your parents' home longer than your peers? YES NO
Your answers to these questions will help you understand if you tend to be a financial averter or underachiever. If you answered yes to five or more questions, it's likely that you are most comfortable depriving yourself and avoiding financial matters. Because you have been unwilling to concern yourself with financial matters, you are probably in debt.
FINANCIAL DEPENDENCE HABITS (FINANCIAL DEPENDENTS AND VIOLATORS)
Do you believe you are incapable of supporting yourself financially? YES NO
2. Are you fearful of financial responsibilities?
YES NO
3. If you are married or living together in a permanent long-term relationship, were you attracted to your partner because you felt he or she could provide for you?

YES NO

10. Do you feel entitled to special financial treatment?
YES NO
11. Do you think other people owe you?
YES NO
12. Is it hard for you to understand people who tell the truth on income tax returns?
YES NO
Your answers to these questions will help you understand if you tend to expect others to provide financial support or opportunities for you. If you answered yes to four or more questions, it's likely that relationships tend to center aroun your financial dependence, or if you are a financial violator, you scheme to manipulate circumstances for your own advancement.

Severity and Progression

As you acquaint yourself with your particular financial habits, you'll need to determine the severity and progression of your situation. Take some time to reflect on and answer the following questions.

1.	Which specific behaviors are especially problematic for you?
2.	Which ones do you think are abnormal?
3.	Which ones do you wish you could stop?
·
4.	Has anyone else ever commented about these behaviors?
	YES NO
5.	What negative consequences have you experienced related to:
	a. spending too much?
	b. shopping excessively?

6.

c.	shopping and then returning items?
d.	hoarding money or things?
e.	being unable to spend money, even when it was critical and you had enough?
f.	not earning enough money to live on?
g.	expecting others to provide for you?
W	hat steps have you taken to try to stop that have not worked?

ow have these behaviors grown worse over time?
Your answers to the above questions will help you determine whether your behaviors and your financial problems have escalated. As you recall, we learned in chapter 2 that these problems tend to get worse over time, despite attempts to improve and despite negative consequences. If, no matter what you do, your problematic use of money continues to get worse, it's likely that you've slipped into addiction territory.
*
These assessment questions are designed for you to take an honest look at yourself and your current money behaviors.
After reflecting on the vast array of money behaviors, where do you think you fit?
Do you believe you lean more toward spending, dependence, hoarding, or underachievement?
How severe do you think your problem is?

Do you think those close to you have money addictions?
If you are still unclear, you may also choose to do the assessment from Debtors Anonymous, listed in appendix B in the book.
Admitting that you have a problem is a great beginning. In the next section the assessment questions will help you recognize the roots of this problem, so you can begin to help yourself.
Understanding Your Money History
As you recall from chapter 3, financial legacies are passed from generation to generation. Asking yourself the following questions will enable you to reflect on your family's money patterns and begin to see how your financial blueprint was formed. You'll start to see patterns in how your specific behaviors replicate your parents' beliefs about money, as well as the monetary dealings that you witnessed.
How You Handled Money as a Child Your relationship with money as a child develops out of a variety of circumstances, including financial stress, a parent's or sibling's addiction, trauma, family status, how you perceived yourself within your family, learning disabilities and school difficulties. The following questions trace the origins of problematic money behaviors.

Beginning Recovery

Phase 1: Hitting Bottom

Telling the Truth

Admitting the ways and the number of times you have sabotaged your own financial health is exceedingly difficult. The following questions are for both indulgers and deprivers. Take some time to answer them; it's an avenue for you to uncover the truth about your behavior.

What do you	onsider dysfunctional about your money behaviors?
How long have	e you been doing things like this?
•	hink will happen if you keep going like this? You'll file for our spouse or partner will leave? You'll become a homeless

Can you	outline your whole financial situation?
YES	NO
Do you h	ave a list of your debts and monthly financial obligations?
YES	NO
Have you	ever asked your family how your money patterns affect them?
YES	NO
What do	you think they'd say?

Phase 2: Accepting and Following Guidance

Step 1. Gather Financial Statements

Gather your financial paperwork: a list of debts, bank statements, credit card statements, and so forth into one central, convenient location. Chart 7-1 on page 25 lists the papers you need to collect in one spot.

Once you have gathered the papers, you are ready to fill in the Debt Worksheet on page 26. Do this without judging yourself. It might be painful to see the numbers in black and white. Feeling this pain will motivate you to change. So list your debts without judging yourself. Your debts don't define you. You are not a good person or a bad person because of your debts. You are a person who wants to improve financial circumstances, and in order to accomplish that, you will need to know the truth about your finances.

Life Visions and Spending Plans

Phase 3: Creating a Life Vision

Step 1. Capture Your Fantasy

You can either write your life vision or share it with a friend, partner, or therapist. Allow yourself some special undisturbed time to spontaneously answer the following questions. Don't worry about getting it all the first time through; fantasies take time to unfold.

That do you want to have or do before you die?
That would you do if you won the lottery?

•	What do you imagine about your retirement? What activities are you hoping to begin after retirement?
•	If a genie came out of a bottle, what magical wishes would you want granted?
•	Have you seen lifestyles portrayed in movies or books that appeal to you? YES NO
•	As a child, what fantasies did you have about your future?
•о	R INDULGERS
va	you are an indulger, ask yourself the following questions to discover what lues lie beneath the objects you fantasize having. (Substitute the actual jects you desire for those in the list.)
•	What will you feel when you're in that house?

• What does driving that fancy car say about you? Whom do you know who has a car like that? Why do you prefer that car instead of another one?
• What associations do you have with this object? Why is it important?
• How does it feel to have a cook, a gardener, and so on?
FOR DEPRIVERS
If you are a depriver, ask yourself these questions:
• What would it say about you if you had more material wealth?
• What would happen if you spent money freely?

•	What adult responsibility do you get to avoid by not having the ability to flex financial muscles?
•	What will it say about you if you have a better job?
•	Do you feel you deserve to replace a possession before the previous one isn't entirely used up or threadbare?
	YES NO
•	Whom would you make happy and whom would you disappoint if you were more successful with finances?
St	ep 2. Develop Personal and Financial/Material Goals
	RSONAL GOALS
	oney is only one aspect of life and only a part of your financial recovery. our overall life vision includes discovering who you are and what you want om life. This requires you to set specific nonmonetary goals. Answering these estions will help you think about your goals:
•	What do you want to do with your life?

History, economics, geography? To play an instrument, speak a language, knit, lay brick pavers, install a garbage disposal, use a lathe, complete college, become a master gardener, or earn a certificate?

FINANCIAL/MATERIAL GOALS

You also need to develop financial and material goals. Refer to chart 8-1 in the book for some examples.

Make a list of these goals and put a dollar figure on each goal. Hopefully, these goals are fun to generate and easy to visualize.

Next make a list of short-term financial goals, including things you intend to purchase for the next twelve months. This list should be more specific, as chart 8-2 in the book illustrates.

Simply list your goals; don't prioritize them or even think about how you will pay for them right now. At this point, stay focused on the list and approximate cost. Don't worry about why you want or need these things.

Weekly Income and Expense Tracker

The Weekly Income and Expense Tracker is an optional way to plan. It helps you plan your payments for the month. It is divided into four columns, one for each week of the month.

- Start by entering your checking account balance (cash in bank) and add any deposits to be made during the month. This gives you the total cash available to pay bills with this week.
- 2 Then fill in every bill to be paid during the month in the weekly column for which it's due. Remember to include grocery money, gas, and any other weekly expenses. Add the bills' amounts to obtain the total amount due.
- 3 Subtract the total amount of bills to be paid from the total cash available.
- 4 After you have subtracted the total amount of bills due from the total cash available, you'll have a remaining amount. This remaining amount gets transferred to the next week, under cash in bank. Remember, if you have a big bill due the second, third, or fourth week of the month, you'll need to carry over money from the previous weeks to cover it.

Phase 5: Changing Your Thinking, Feelings, and Impulsive Actions

Triggers

External Iriggers
External triggers are environmental circumstances that influence your money behaviors. Refer to page 148 in chapter 9 of Spent for some examples of external triggers.
List external triggers that are difficult for you.
To combat external triggers, you'll have to avoid these situations at first. Do not use the Internet for personal use for a certain amount of time. Call catalog companies and tell them to remove you from their mailing list. Make a spending plan just for your holiday season or for vacations. List other methods that you'll use to handle these triggers.

Internal Triggers

Internal triggers are numerous, more difficult to identify, and more difficult to avoid than external triggers. The two major categories of internal triggers are difficult feelings and distorted thinking. We'll start with some of the feelings that typically trigger a return to money problems, along with strategies for coping with them.

DIFFICULT FEELINGS

Difficult moods and feelings can trigger indulging or depriving behavior. Common triggers are listed here:

- Anger
- Anxiety or panic
- Depression
- · Loss or grief
- Shame
- Boredom
- Pain
- Happiness

Think about this list and identify which feelings are difficult for you. If you don't know what feelings are triggers for you, then consider joining a support group or counseling with the specific goal of learning to identify your feelings.

You've been coping with your feelings already, whether you know it or not; your coping mechanism has been to indulge or deprive yourself. When you stop using money to handle your feelings, you'll need an entirely new repertoire of coping techniques. Refer to the lists of coping strategies on pages 150–151 in the book.

Take some time to list other useful coping strategies. These strategies should include ways to connect to your feelings, to your loved ones, and to the world around you. They should include avenues of self-expression. They should include relaxation techniques to calm and soothe yourself. And they should include ways to distract yourself when difficult feelings are triggered that you can't seem to "unplug."

List other approaches that have helped you in the past or that you would like to experiment with.			ı would

Preventing Impulsive Spending

To help you monitor your purchases and to figure out whether you are spending impulsively or planfully, you can answer these questions. (Make copies of this sheet if necessary.)

1.	What did you buy?
2.	How did you pay for it?
3.	Was it on the spending plan? YES NO
4.	How did you feel before, during, and after the purchase?
5.	What criteria did you use to justify the purchase? Do you need it or want it?
6.	Did you tell someone about it beforehand?

YES

NO

7.	Who will this purchase affect? Will they benefit from it? Suffer because of it?
8.	How will this purchase affect your future?

Phase 6: Living the Abundant Life

Relationships

The experts who study terminally ill and dying patients tell us that at the end of life, the dying speak of regrets in relationships, not material achievement or acquisition. In the end, it's the people we love and who love us back that matter, not things. At the end, we say good-bye to people, not things. When there is nothing left to achieve or accomplish in the world, we remember our connections. Everything else fades into the distance.

Think deep and hard about your ability to relate and connect to those you love. Take time to reflect on the following questions.

to them? Have or why not?	e you express	sea your 10	eelings of c	connection to	them? Why

•	Whom have you lost connection with? What is that like? Do you feel okay about losing the connection?
•	Who has influenced you? Have you told them? Why or why not? Whom do you try to influence? How do you do this? Why do you want to be an influence for them?
•	Who has opened you to love more fully? Have you told them? Why or why not? How could you love them more fully?

s you? How do you Oo they know what t		from them? What is that less to you?
the people you love? ess it enough? Do the	•	emonstrate your love? Do

Appendix A

Are You Codependent?

The first person to feel the pinch of a money addiction or money problems is often a spouse or family member. It's often the partner who feels the pain of the debt or the hoarding. Sometimes the coping mechanism for the pain is to become codependent. This is always problematic. A codependent derives self-esteem by controlling the emotions and financial behaviors of the addict. Codependents support, unconsciously encourage, or "enable" the problem user's or addict's behavior.

To discern financial codependency, answer the following questions.

1.	Do you fo	eel responsible for a loved one's behavior?
	YES	NO
	Describe.
2.		ry to fix or control the loved one's behavior?
	YES	NO
	Describe.

3.	Are you un	able to say no to your loved ones?
	YES I	NO
	Describe.
4.	Have you a loved one's	adjusted your spending and/or saving in any way to meet the demands?
	YES I	NO
	Describe.
of y	your enabling	ou are codependent, you need to begin to look at the severity g behavior. The following questions address the dynamics of the ationship and highlight the codependent's contribution to the action.
1.	Have you c	overed up for your partner's dysfunctional money behaviors?
	YES I	NO
	Why?

2.	Have you	spent less than you normally would in order to compensate for the oversp	pending of your partner?
	YES	NO
	Give exar	mples.
3.	the mone	made any adjustments to your income in order to accommodate y-related behaviors of a loved one? For example, have you taken onal work or a second job?
	YES	NO
4.	Have you	ever asked a third party for money to pay your partner's debts?
	YES	NO
5.	Have you	risked your own credit rating to help your partner?
	YES	NO
6.	•	ever overdrawn your own bank account or put yourself into jeopardy to pay your partner's debts?
	YES	NO
7.	Have you behaviors	ever argued with your partner about his or her money-related?
	YES	NO

16. Have you ever borrowed from others or depleted your savings to pay off your partner's debts?

YES NO

17. Have you deprived yourself in order to compensate for your partner's behavior?

YES NO

Your answers to these questions will help you determine if you are codependently involved with a problem user or a money addict. If you answered yes to six or more questions, it's likely that you have attempted to control or fix your loved one's problems. In doing this, you've unwittingly participated in another's destructive money behaviors. If this is the case, it's imperative for you to redirect your helping behavior to yourself.

If you are codependent, you probably derive a lot of satisfaction from helping others. This makes it difficult for you to recognize that you yourself need help, too. Consider attending therapy or support groups such as Co-Dependents Anonymous (CoDA) or Al-Anon. You might also find the books Codependent No More by Melody Beattie or Facing Codependence by Pia Mellody to be helpful.
